When growing up with her mother, she learned how to be proud of herself and of other black people. It talks about Rosa Parks becoming known as “the Mother of the Civil Rights Movement” because of a very brave thing she did, which was refusing to give up a seat to a white person. She was arrested because of this and black people refused to ride buses anymore. And after months, with the help of Martin Luther King, the US Supreme Court said that the bus company had to change its rules. It was a great victory for black people and this book really told her story.	Book Type: Biography Setting and Time Period: Alabama; 1950s Subjects: Social Studies
